Nir Sivan Architects

is a dynamic and creative practice whose international projects are of architectural, sculptural and experimental significance. Founded by architect Nir Sivan in 2006, and based in Rome, the company has branches in Israel and Brazil

Design approach

We believe that the creation of architecture and design should not be limited by conventional instruments, but expanded through a multidisciplinary approach.

The terms “sculpture” and “automotive design” are common in our everyday language and influence our way of thinking.

We pay special attention to the continuing evolution of technology and planning methodology. Our extensive experience in parametric (100% BIM) design combined with different modelling environments and within various industries means we are able to govern and refine the most complex geometries. We can therefore offer clients a unique design, with the enhanced ability to illustrate each stage as it evolves while simultaneously keeping tight control over the whole project.

Among the practice’s recent projects is the Onda Carioca/ Carioca Wave considered to be the first freeform architecture in South America (Rio de Janeiro, Brazil)

Hospital 9 de Julho new facade concept (Sao Paulo, Brazil)

Horizontal White private residence in (Rome, Italy)
